Notes

*Lady Elaine remarried, following the death of the Crown Prince, to Sir Vernon Hooper, a minor country squire. This caused a breach with her family (who had hoped to leverage her influence at Court with another advantageous match) who insisted on bringing up the infant Prince James themselves, away from what they saw as his mother's low associates and with the King, whose permission should have been sought and was not. Elaine never saw her son again and died giving birth to a daughter, Margaret ("Molly") in 1660.

The coat of arms decorating the Gaaldine Family tree is that of Charis of Gondal, and that decorating the Gondal family tree is that of Sherlock of Gaaldine

Children dying in infancy or without issue have been omitted from the tree for the sake of simplicity